Music Education

Music is one of the greatest forms of communication between people and cultures. It not only is the universal language but is also highly important to a complete education..

When to Begin Music Lessons

Though it is best that music lessons begin early in life, it is never too late. Adults who start or resume lessons have reading and other skills that often help them learn more quickly. Jim, a retired chemist, began piano lessons last year. He has progressed very well and finds great enjoyment in music. (above picture)

For children and youth, I offer private and group lessons for piano and voice. We can discuss your needs, interests and other questions by phone or in person. .

Musical Aptitude

EVERYONE has musical aptitude - the inborn capacity to respond to musical sounds and to create music. This varies with individuals, though most who have acquired music skills say that it's only 10% "talent" or inspiration and 90% perspiration!

Anyone Can Sing!

Through a sincere desire and voice lessons the voice can be improved. Piano ability also helps as it develops musicianship and trains the ear. The term "tone deaf" is too often used to describe someone who most often just needs vocal help in hearing and matching musical tones. I've seen great progress working with "uncertain" singers over the years. One can learn to sing well.

Music benefits last a lifetime

Music teaches discipline and persistence.
Music develops concentration.
Music improves reading and math skills.
Music has social and health benefits.
Music develops leadership skills.
Music develops the right and left brain.
